MR. B. NYE GOES TO SEA.

AFTER HAVING ATTENDED A CHINESE THEATRICAL PERFORMANCE.

The Voyage Rendered Interesting by the Presence of a Storm, a Practical Joker and a School of Whales-The Sturgeon's oculiarities.

(Copyright, 1890, by Edgar W. Nye.] At Marysville, Cal., I attended the Chinese theatre. I did not enjoy it very much. The building was quite plain on the inside, the seats having been voluptuously fashioned from fence boards. The play itself I judged was one of love and crime. Especially crime. Three actors and two actresses, all of the same sex, however, took part in the play. The Chinese language is very difficult for me to understand unless I pay very close attention. Once I was obliged to tell the comedian to speak a little louder.

There are several thousand characters in the Chinese. They have almost every kind of character except what is known as the moral character. The Chinese were on the eve of a big celebration in honor of the erection of the Joss house. They invited me to participate, but I told them that I had never made a profession of religion and I did not think it would be proper. So they excused me.

We took the sleeper on the Central Pacific railroad for San Francisco, and were just in time to catch the steamer State of alifornia for Portland. Out through the Golden Gate on a glorious morning at 10 o'clock we steamed softly away, as the poet says. Oakland, and Nob Hill, und Goat Island, and Telegraph Hill, and Lone Mountain, and the Cliff House, and Butro Heights, one by one faded away. The croupy baying of the sea lions grew more indistinct, the asthmatic engine quickened its stroke, and we were abroad on the heaving chest of the Pacific.

Some got out their glasses, and others their summer literature, and some their lunches, but most every one went below to divest himself of what is known as the California, flea. Large flocks of sea gulls, poised on The gull is not a very pretty bird, neimuch ease and grace, but his song reminds me of the remark made by an aged horse I once owned, who had formed he unfortunate habit of cribbing. The gull is a good rondster, but his voice needs a little machine oil on the second joint. He pursues a ship on tireless wing for days at a time, taking anything that may be offered by kind friends, always giving a grateful creak in return, His ambitions are not praiseworthy, however, and his aspirations are offal.

On the way out of the bay I saw our old friend the practical joker. He had been with us several days on the cars and at hotels. He was getting some more jokes ready for the voyage. God did not see fit to shower any brains on him, but after completing the flea and pronouncing him good the practical oker was produced from the shavings and debris left over on the completion of the fien. He began life by jerking the chair out from beneath his old blind grandmother and laughing immoderately when she broke her neck. He then advanced rapidly in hellishness, doing this same trick for the paster whilst the latter temporarily stood up at table in order more deftly to stab a hot, saleratus biscuit. The boy now began to try more difficult jobs and soon coal oiled a St. Bernard dog. Then, lighting him, he turned him loose In a primary school for the blind, where he succeeded in burning up quite a number of children, whilst his own eyes bill, twinkled with merriment.

Well, he was on board. I did not like him very much, for he had stuffed my pipestem full of paper once, and, though got it out in half the time it took him Flarge, full grown man with whiskers was dead, and looked like a fat man I saw in the Parls morgue last summer. disgrace a reform school and shock a "Siwasa" Indian.

On the second day, while he was stimulating himself, preparatory to having a past for that matter, thought as he was led to believe, a giant billow struck us abaft the scuppers on the lee how. The ship keeled over till the salt spray rolled down the smokestack, and then seemed to hesitate a full minute ere she righted herself before the public, and then went over as far on the other side. I had never taken any interest in this practical foker, and had no curiosity whatever about his habits of Hie or diet. I did not care a cent about what he ate, and I always believe in people selecting such food as best agrees with them. I do not know yet how he got it into his head that I felt any intershow me at some length his notions about diet, furnishing a suitable style of have commanded my sympathy if he had been a human being.

How much better it is to leave our re venge in the hands of a higher power! How much better it will be attended to and how much time it gives us in which to mind our own business! That young man, when he got to the mouth of the Columbia, was the most untenanted and deserted and absolutely unfurnished man

He wanted to die, but I told him it would not be right. I went in to see him frequently. I would most always take him some Vienna sausages and boiled cabbage, with hot doughnuts or some little delicacy like that, and while they shed their gentle fragrance through his hot, close state room, I would speak to him of his lost and undone condition in low, passionate tones, meantime smoking a rich, brown cob pipe loaded with dog

I often think yet of the hopeless look on his face and wonder if, after all, during that terrible voyage, my gentle presence socked a single ray of sunshine into his otherwise dark and cheerless life,

It was a terrible storm. We did not realize it fully at the time, but afterward, while on shore, refitting and refurnishing ourselves, we found out that it had been a very severe gale, and that the Sound steamer Umatilla had suffered considerably, and if a Sound steamer would suffer at such a time what could you expect of an unsound one? But we will let that pass.

The mouth of the Columbia is one of the most active and dangerous, if we except that of Corporal Tanner, perhaps, that I have ever met up with. Looking inte it on that Sabbath morning I judged the river to be about fourteen thousand years of age. And yet its teeth are very good. We could see them distinctly.

At daybreak I rose, as is my custom, to examine the sun, and also to see the practical joker dusting off the coating of his stomach by means of a whisk broom, and to our left the shaggy brow of Cape Disappointment loomed up in the cold gray of the early morning. The yellow waters of the Columbia came down to salute the deep blue of the Pacific, and over the Bar the white breakers mingled their spray with the threatening sky.

It is a nasty place to ride over even when you are feeling well, but if one has been ill and has not yet recovered, one almost wishes that the ship would go to the bottom and not be too dilatory about it, either. So the practical joker told me, for I was not ill at all. I took my meals frequently and ate them in his room. At night I would, before going to bed, eat some crackers and Swiss cheese by his bedside, while I read to him page after page of "Robert Elsmere," When he reads this I fear sometimes that he will almost hate me. And yet I am not malicious I love everybody. Almost. And I try to make their lives happier, if I can. I shed sunshine wherever I go,

We rode along with a primary school of whales the last day. There must have been a dozen of them. A man who knew everything, having been associated two or three weeks with the Rev. Joseph Cook, said they were right whales. do not know how he could tell, for you couldn't see a particle of the whale except the squirt of water which marked his locality. But some men are so able not differ from the American flea, except that at times it must give them great

He told me all about whales and everynia. His motto is: "We never sleep, thing else. I did not know that whales nor allow anybody else to do so," Also, were rights and lefts, but it seems that they are. Whale oil is not used in salad This little insect is what might be dressing any more. The whale is a mammal. I would rather be a right whale great and the eminent of all ages and all than to be president. The female whale does not lay eggs like the fish, but produces her young alive like the Piute Iner of the legislature would. He also has dian and other brutes. She nurses her own young, especially if help should be scarce, and sometimes becomes the head of quite a family. The father, however, is quite migra graceful wing, followed us far out to sea, tory and irresponsible to a degree, Whales live to a great age and lead a her is he a good songster. He flies with very wet and uneventful life. They are taken with the harpoon.

The whaler, while singing, accompanies himself on this instrument. My ancestors were whalers and men of undaunted courage, so they were often heard to say. They went into the whaling business at that time in the history of the country when the pirate business became so dull along the high seas. The Columbia river sturgeon is also a Oh, he just bubbled over with this large water fowl, frequently growing to a great size. He attains a weight of 600 pounds, and has a head that looks like that of Goliath of Gath after his two round set-to with David.

I saw one of these sturgeons lying on put it in, I have no patience with a the dock at Kalama the other day. At night they would also come up stairs and bite the children. They plagued him a good deal. Often they would chase the cattle around | Bazar, the yard and frighten his wife. The sturgeon dies hard, often refusing to ascend the golden stair for twentywater. Although his head often weighs over 100 pounds, he is not a deep thinker, and it takes him a day or two to get it through his head that he is a corpse. Aside from the Greenback party and Thompson's colt, he probably does more to discourage the overworked fool killer than anybody of whom history has informed us. He likes very much, also, to wrap the drapery of a large salmon net about him and lie down to pleasant dreams. When he is rudely awakened he hears strange voices. They are fishermen's voices. They are employed in swearing. I heard them doing this one day, down toward Astoria, when I was aboard the S. G. Reed. They are generally men who have had very few advantages, especially of foreign travel, or study of the profanity of the old world, but they manage to get along very well, I thought. I could hear all they said, and I judged from the general drift of their conversation that this four hours after he is removed from the A Correspondent Writes of This Brilliant, Brainy Woman.

[Special Correspondence.] NEW YORK, April 17. - Kate Field, who is characterized by a prominent journalist as the very brainiest woman in the United States, is an easy woman to interview. She throws herself back in her steamer chair which has gone all over creation and a part of Canada with her, crosses her small feet and begins talking as slowly as if dictating to a typewriter, giving you plenty of time to jot some of her opinions. sympathize with the interviewer," she said to me, "for often as a journalistic

This brilliant, audacious, aggressive caustic style and with a smile on her lips "Poor things!" exclaimed Jones, all even when dealing the most cutting the milk of human kindness promptly blows. She is a curious mixture of diplomacy and fearlessness, now veiling her real sentiments under the most politic of utterances, anon flinging prudence to the winds. She is assertive, and sets forth her ideas with an air which seems to say: "That's what I, Kate Field, think. You can like it or not, as you

Katherine Van Arnheim, a very talented and beautiful Chicago singer, was present one day when Miss Field was laving down laws for using the voice, which the artist at once discovered to be absolutely worthless. Mme. Van Arnheim is always ready to discuss the regulation of the voice, and although she was a comparative stranger to Miss Field, at once joined issue with her.

"How do you dare, Miss Field, to say thus and so about the manner in which one should use the voice in singing-you, who cannot use it properly in speaking,

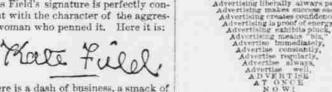

"And pray, who are you," sharply asked Miss Field, "to dispute me in this fashion?"

"Well," said Van Arnheim, "I may be very small potatoes compared to Miss Kate Field, but I know something of the voice, and I tell you you are all wrong." After this tilt the two became great friends, Another woman who dares to differ from this distinguished feminine autocrat is Margaret Sullivan, of Chicago, She was breakfasting with Miss Field not long since in Washington, and was pouring milk in her tea when Kate cried: "How can you drink milk in your tea?

Don't you know that it's leather?" "I like leather," was the calm reply of Mrs. Sullivan, as she proceeded to drink conceit, a propensity to fight and a tendency to lay the law down pretty sharply visible in this signature. Any one who has ever come in contact with Kate Field would expect just such a fist from her .. E. S. T.

Miss Field's signature is perfectly consonant with the character of the aggres-

A Girdle of Pies Round the Earth. 000 pies were eaten in New York every

This sounds like a fairy yarn, but when figured out it allows just fifteen pies a year to every man, woman and child in the city. One pie will cut into four pieces, fifteen pies will make sixty pieces, and one piece eaten every six days will make fifteen pies a year. There ry Tom Smithers. If you do, it will kill are a great many in the city who eat ten times this amount of pie every year, and She-You're safe then. I'm going to there are a great many who never eat it

The average cost of a pie is ten cents, and thus the average amount of money spent in this city for pie each year is $2,500,000. There is a pie for every season of the year—mince pie for winter, son of the year—mince pie for winter, son of the year—mince pie for winter, etc., always on hand. huckleberry pie for summer, and peach pie, plum pie, cherry pie, cranberry pie, pumpkin pie, custard pie, pineapple pie, emon ple, rhubarb pie and every other kind of pie for almost every week in the year. Mince pie is said to have the biggest sale, and in one bakery alone tons of mince meat are made every year, trade?" said the tramp to the scarecrow, and forty barrels of apples are chopped up every day,

The average pie is a foot in diameter, ary business," answered the scarecrow, so in a single year the citizens of this city eat more than 4,560 miles of pie, and in less than two years and a half they will have eaten enough pie to have Sappy-Yaas, doncherknow, when that formed a band of pie crust around the earth at the equator.

The average pie is two inches thick and if placed one on top of another the pie eaten in two and a half years would reach to the height of a thousand miles. Taking the average weight of a pie as one pound, the total weight consumed in one year would be 12,500 tons. If all this pie were put in one heap and the average weight carried away by men, women and children was fifteen pounds each, it would take the entire population of the city of New York to remove it, if no one took a second load.
